

Personality Type Report Exclusively for Maria Wilson

Introduction

Of the many factors that contribute to a successful education and subsequent career, an understanding of personality type is among the most useful.

While interests and skills change during the course of a person's life, the one thing that does remain constant is an individual's personality type — the innate way in which each person naturally prefers to see the world and make decisions. All individuals are unique, but people of the same type share large similarities in the kinds of academic subjects and careers they find interesting, and the kind of work they find satisfying.

By understanding the role personality type plays, people can gain important insights into their educational, career and relationship needs. And because people of different types often communicate in very different ways, counselors and advisors can learn which strategies work most effectively with each individual student.

Understanding you, Maria

People like you are quiet, gentle and caring. When people first meet you, you may seem reserved and cool. But once you get to know and care about someone, you are warm and very loyal. You tend to be cautious about jumping into social activities and may resist trying new experiences. Instead, you like spending time with one or two close, trusted friends or spending time alone, enjoying the things that really interest you.

You are considerate, respectful and sensitive, and usually find tension or conflict between people very uncomfortable. Since you have strong beliefs about right and wrong and always try to treat other people kindly, you may be hurt or offended easily by the insensitivity or callousness of others.

You are also unpretentious, practical and sincere. You speak clearly and literally, and want others to be equally explicit in explaining directions or stating their expectations of you. You tend to be selective about things like food and clothing, are usually tidy and organized, and prefer to be dressed appropriately for all occasions. You're also careful with your money and possessions.

You are probably blessed with an excellent memory for details, especially facts about people, but may find it hard to read between the lines or deal with a lot of abstractions. Since you like to make a decision and stick with it, you are often annoyed when plans are changed suddenly. You're not a big risk taker and are happiest with a predictable daily routine. While you want to please the people close to you, you are rarely willing to compromise on really important issues.

Note: Based on our assessment, your personality type is "ISFJ."

Your Strengths and Blindspots

Everyone has strengths and weaknesses. The key to finding the best path for all people is by using their natural strengths and becoming aware of their natural blindspots.

Your strengths may include:

- Thoroughly researching information and collecting relevant facts
- Making thoughtful decisions based on practical considerations
- Conducting organized, well-planned-out research
- Impressing people that you are a hardworking, ethical, conscientious person
- Being a good listener and not dominating the conversation

Your blindspots may include:

- Being too humble, and not presenting your accomplishments in the best possible context
- Appearing to be less enthusiastic than you may really be
- Not being open to explore possibilities that don't fit your current plan
- Not anticipating how decisions you make now may affect you in the future
- Lacking objectivity when making important decisions

Your College Satisfiers

- A stable, friendly, non-competitive environment where you can learn at your own pace
- A solid curriculum that teaches practical skills that will help you achieve specific career goals
- The opportunity to work independently or collaborate with other students in small groups if you choose
- Courses that are based upon established facts and documented data, and involve fact-based research
- A friendly, nurturing and involved faculty, advisors and staff -- who are available, but won't push themselves on you

Your Career Satisfiers

- Allow you to use your talent for being accurate and remembering facts and details
- Let you work on tangible projects that help other people in some way
- Let you work in private and not require lots of public interaction
- Take place in a stable, calm and predictable environment
- Make good use of your conscientiousness and sound common sense
- Have clearly stated expectations and goals
- Let you focus your energy on one project at a time
- Give you plenty of time and space to do your work uninterrupted

Your Preferred Learning Style

While ALL individuals are unique, people of the same type often learn best in similar ways. The following summarizes what you need in order to maximize learning:

- Plenty of time to reflect and prepare thoroughly
- The option of working alone or with small groups
- A predictable structure, clear expectations and explicit instructions
- Real examples and a focus on the practical application of learning
- A friendly, supportive, tension-free learning environment
- Rewards for your accuracy, thoroughness and conscientiousness

Your Interpersonal Negotiating Style

People negotiate with each other all the time, whether it's arranging to borrow the car, requesting more time to finish a project, or even deciding which restaurant to visit with friends. In school and at work, the ability to negotiate effectively is especially important. Following are some strengths and blindspots that have the potential to influence your negotiations with others:

Possible Strengths

- Meticulous and thorough; possess impressive command of relevant facts and details
- Warm and welcoming; make opponents feel comfortable and unthreatened
- Organized and efficient; comfortable following prescribed process
- Great depth of focus; ability to stay on task and explore issues in depth
- Reliable and trustworthy; inspire opponents to have confidence in your honesty and integrity

Possible Blindspots

- May be uncomfortable considering new ideas, especially if they have yet to be successfully demonstrated elsewhere
- May find adversarial aspect of negotiations too unharmonious and stressful
- May become overwhelmed when required to juggle several ideas or proposals at the same time
- May have difficulty predicting future impact of current proposals
- May become intimidated by more aggressive opponents
